The Faculty Survey of Student Engagement (FSSE) measures faculty and instructor expectations for undergraduate student engagement in educational practices that are empirically linked with learning and development. FSSE complements the National Survey of Student Engagement (NSSE), which is administered to undergraduate students. Although most participating institutions use FSSE and NSSE concurrently, FSSE can be administered on its own.

FSSE targets faculty members and other instructional staff who teach at least one undergraduate course in the current academic year. For FSSE's purposes, "faculty" refers to all those who teach undergraduate courses. Since FSSE's inception, more than 304,000 faculty members from over 870 colleges and universities have participated in the survey.

Why Choose FSSE?

Information from those who teach undergraduates at your institution offers insight into the quality of student learning experiences. FSSE results, particularly in combination with NSSE, can inspire productive discussions related to teaching and learning. Institutions use FSSE results in many ways—accreditation self-studies, assessment and improvement, curricular reform, professional development, institutional research, faculty and graduate student workshops and retreats, and Scholarship of Teaching and Learning initiatives.

FSSE focuses on

- The use of effective teaching strategies
- Encouraging student collaboration
- The nature and frequency of student-faculty interactions
- Opportunities for students to engage with diverse perspectives
- The importance faculty place on institutional support for students
- The importance faculty place on various areas of learning and development

How Is FSSE Administered?

FSSE staff manage all aspects of survey administration, including invitations and follow-up messages, delivery of the online survey, compilation of data, and reporting of results. Note the following administration details and options:

- FSSE will be administered in Spring 2020.
- Each institution provides the names and email addresses of its selected sample of faculty, instructors, and/or graduate students who taught at least one undergraduate course in the 2019–20 academic year.
- Customization options for FSSE include Topical Modules, consortium questions to parallel those asked on NSSE, and the creation of disciplinary areas.

Prior to survey administration, we strongly recommend that each institution contact all sample members to emphasize the institution's support for the survey.

FSSE Topical Modules

Up to two question sets from the following list can be appended to FSSE:

Academic Advising	Scholarship of Teaching and Learning
Inclusiveness and Engagement with Cultural Diversity	Development of Transferable Skills Civic Engagement
Experiences with Writing	Learning with Technology
